

12/03/2005

BLOG: sixnewthings.com

Saturday, December 03, 2005 sixnewthings.com in The Boston Globe sixnewthings.com popped up in an article that originated with The Boston Globe.

The piece subsequently has gone out on the wires and been published in several newspapers across the United States.

Globe Columnist Bruce Mohl wrote, "Each month, SixNewThings gives its corporate road warrior subscribers an idea of what's new and interesting in 70 cities across North America. The six items featured are gleaned from the two co-publishers' own sources as well as the Internet, blogs, and podcasts."

"Jeff Herrington, one of the publishers, said the idea is to give subscribers things to do but not overwhelm them or duplicate what would be in a standard guidebook."

"It's what's new, what's brand new,' he said."

It's nice to be noticed. The article says more about 6NT and we'll link to the article or excerpt the entire piece once we get permission.

Also featured in the Globe's column were:

WallBounce.com: which we weren't aware of prior to reading the piece, they plan pretty cool, exclusive "experiences" (private movie screening for you and 99 of your friends, dinner for 8 at private chef's table, etc.);

ThingsToDo.com: which covers a broad range of, well... things to do, traditional tourist sites and the like; and DailyCandy.com: a charmingly-illustrated site dedicated to shopping, beauty and trendy restaurants in seven North American cities.

Check 'em out.

posted by Randall White; 9:07p