

Sports

David King

Web Posted: 06/02/2006 12:00 AM CDT

San Antonio Express-News

CYBER SHOPPING

Last week, we detailed your chance to play a game against the Creaking Legends of Brazilian Soccer.

This week, it's against 47 other Creaking Old Ballplayers Looking to Regain Their Youth.

Well, maybe that's a little harsh.

A Web site called Wallbounce.com is offering the ultimate baseball fantasy package, a chance to train with members of the National Baseball Hall of Fame for six days in Cooperstown, N.Y. For just $7,995, you can spend Oct. 6-11 taking part in a fantasy camp led by George Brett, Ozzie Smith, Phil Niekro and Eddie Murray.

That price also includes uniforms, lodging in Cooperstown, a round of golf and more, although you're still on your own to get there.

If you're not a weekend warrior — but you still have truckloads of cash — there's always the upcoming baseball auction at Sothebys.com.

Among the items up for bid is the Milwaukee Braves jersey Hank Aaron wore when he was a rookie in 1954, estimated value of between $150,000 and $250,000.

Too rich for your blood? There's an autographed photo of Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth from their 1927 barnstorming tour, estimated value $60,000-$70,000, or a "press" pin from the 1927 World Series, valued at between $2,000 and $3,000.

To see the complete catalog of items online, go to Sothebys.com and look for the June 24 auction of "important sports memorabilia and cards."